Hive Network presents 'How to make money in the music business'. This event is aimed at those already working, or aspiring to work, in the music industry and will address some of the current issues for industry professionals.

John Robb (journalist, musician and broadcaster), will lead a debate with a specially selected expert panel of key industry figures including Rebecca Boulton (Prime Management – manager of New Order), Phil Chadwick (manager of Elbow), Neil Claxton (Faith & Hope Records) and Stuart Parsons (Loud in Libraries), with contributions from Karen Boardman (Crisis Management/Sound Investment). Full details of the panel can be found on our website (www.hive.eventbrite.com)

Themes for the discussion will include:

- The infinite demand for current expertise in music management and representation
- Career opportunities and professional gateways into the music industry
- How technical and industry innovations are creating new sources of income
- Developing new venues and rehearsal/workspace

Festive Social:

Following the Q&A delegates will have the opportunity to network and a buffet meal with complimentary drinks will be served at 7.30. The event will also feature live performances from special guests including the Burnley Bollywood Brass Band and Mary HD with Luko.

Hive Network events are organised by Lancashire County Council's Creative Lancashire business development team
